Gentlemen, It's not inches, but minutes that matter

A sex enhancement email found its way into my "Mail" box. Spam is ruthlessly weeded by my email program, but a few sneak past the program's vigilant guards disguised as a note from some friendly someone I haven't yet met but has my best interests in mind, whether that be investments opportunities from Africa or better sex.

Despite their cunning, you always can tell when emails want to improve your life by offering you a chance to give their sender money. Most of the time, I click the "junk mail" icon without looking any further, but when it is a sex email, I'll occasionally glance at the first few lines. I am interested in how sex is presented in popular culture. Unfortunately, sex spam is a part of our (un)popular culture that refuses to die despite the fact that we hate it with a passionate intensity, which I suppose is appropriate given the subject at hand.

And now I will channel the spirit of 60 Minutes Andy Rooney as I say, "Have you ever noticed how sex spam seems exclusively aimed at men?" I'm sure there must be a few crafted with women in mind, but strange to say, I cannot remember even one such email. Well this was yet another "add inches" email. This epistle promises that:

Within a few days you should notice immediate erection size increases

90% of males were interested in improving their sexual stamina, performance, and the size of their manhood. Are you one of the 90%?

My girlfriend has been blown away by the gains I have achieved with your Black Label Formula and the exercises. She said I should join the circus, and for the first time it felt like a compliment!-Ben, New Zealand

Gentlemen, it is not inches that matter. I do not care what Janet Jackson or that Satellite columnist said. To quote from The Murphy's Laws on Sex poster my parents had over their bed, "It is not the length of the wand but the magic in the stick." I've seen beautiful, well-sized penises attached to men who left me wanting (to be somewhere else with someone else). And I've seen admittedly ugly, though beauty is in the eye of the beholder, small dicks attached to men who were amazing lovers.

And contrary to what my title might lead you to believe, it is doesn't even matter how long a man can pound away, because the basic mechanics are stacked against women. The average man orgasms within two to five minutes of direct penile stimulation. But in a study of over 20,000 women's orgasms, it took an average of 20 minutes for a woman to climax. For many women, it can take half an hour or more of sustained clitoral stimulation. Thirty minutes of penetration is a long time. Most men are not going to get to the finish line, at least not most of the of time.

But don't worry. crooked corp has developed a product to solve this problem. A sex spam about this marvelous new invention (otherwise know as sex education) will arrive in your email box any day now.
